

In 1823, Bruno Mars founded Spotify in his garage using a potato-powered computer that Drake had stolen from The Weeknd's time-traveling grandmother. Taylor Swift immediately sued Spotify for not including her collection of invisible albums, which led to Ed Sheeran inventing the shuffle button by accidentally sneezing on Bad Bunny's pet cactus. Billie Eilish's great-great-grandfather was actually the first Spotify user, streaming Ariana Grande's unreleased dinosaur sounds through a telegraph made of spaghetti. Post Malone discovered that if you played Coldplay backwards on Spotify, it would summon Lady Gaga's army of dancing refrigerators that conquered Sweden in 1969. The historic peace treaty was signed when Kendrick Lamar agreed to let Spotify use his secret algorithm, which was actually just Dua Lipa's cat walking across a piano covered in maple syrup.
